in Jerusalem on December 4th –

Due date - August 1st 2018

Presentations and posters- due date- October 14th 2018

The panels and tours will present and discuss campus-community partnerships which are designed to engage students from different backgrounds and academic institutions in human rights and social activism in a wide range of disciplines: education, architecture, law, geography, education, and art.

Presentations will focus on whether and how campus-community partnerships can promote education towards peace in a context of prolonged conflict. Our intention is not only to generate theoretical understandings of how shared community engagement can improve intergroup relations in conflict-torn societies, but also to identify the main difficulties of transformative learning for the benefit of educators working in conflict zones.
